Quiz Answers

In one sentence, what does your business do?

Concept Inc. is a turnkey production and events company that brings clients' ideas to life through expertly curated audio, lighting, and live experiences.

Who is your primary target audience?

Event creators and hosts in South Africa — wedding couples, corporate event managers, hotel and venue operators, restaurant owners, and festival promoters — who want a production partner that handles everything from sound and lighting to atmosphere and execution.

If you had to describe your brand's personality in exactly 3 words, what would they be?

Expert. Creative. Resilient.

When someone encounters your brand for the first time, what do you want them to feel?

Excited and inspired by possibilities

Complete this sentence: "My brand exists to help people..."

...bring their concept to life — whether they arrive with a fully formed vision or just want their guests to have an unforgettable time.

How does your brand communicate?

Confident expert—we give clear guidance and solutions

Where does your brand sit on these personality spectrums?

- Traditional ↔ Modern: 4 (quite modern)
- Serious ↔ Playful: 3 (middle)
- Professional ↔ Casual: 2 (quite professional)
- Bold ↔ Subtle: 2 (quite bold)
- Luxurious ↔ Accessible: 4 (quite accessible)
- Minimalist ↔ Expressive: 4 (quite expressive)

Which brand archetype resonates most with your business?

The Magician - You transform lives, turn vision into reality, and make the impossible possible (Apple, Disney, Tesla)

Which is your SECOND choice from the list above?

The Creator - You help people express themselves, build things, or bring ideas to life through innovation and imagination (Adobe, Lego, Etsy)

Which colour palette feels most aligned with your brand?

Modern & Minimal (black, white, one accent colour)

What style of typography feels right for your brand?

Clean & Simple (minimalist sans-serif)

Which sentence sounds most like how your brand would communicate?

"Ready to transform your event? Let's make it happen!"

Which visual style appeals to you most?

Geometric, structured, modern

Name 2-3 brands (any industry) whose personality or visual style you admire. What do you like about them?

Apple, Tesla... ?

What do you want to make sure your brand does NOT feel like?

Too generic/forgettable

Complete this sentence: "Clients choose us over competitors because we're the only ones who..."

...actually solve problems on the spot — because we've worked every side of the event, from the stage to the lighting desk to the load-in, so when something breaks or shifts, we fix it without flinching.

Who are your main competitors, and how is your brand personality different from theirs?

Gearhouse, MGG, Sound Select, AV Direct. How Concept Inc's personality differs:

- The big players are technical-first and transactional — they show up, execute the brief on the spec sheet, and leave. Their brand personality is corporate, equipment-focused, and feels like dealing with a logistics company. They're competent but uncreative, and their people work to scope rather than to outcome.
- Concept Inc. is experience-first and collaborative — built by performers and producers who understand both how a room feels and how it works. The brand is bold, warm, and creatively confident. Where competitors offer gear and crew, Concept Inc. offers curation and judgement. The personality is more like a creative director who happens to own the rigging than a rental company that happens to have ideas."

When someone lands on your website, what should their immediate impression be?

- "These people really know their stuff"
- "This is creative and inspiring"
- "This feels professional and established"

Imagine your brand walks into a room. Describe them in 3-5 sentences. What are they wearing? How do they speak? What's their energy like?

They don't walk in — they arrive. Dressed sharp in clean black, sleeves rolled, with the easy confidence of someone who's done this a thousand times and still finds it fun. They speak clearly and articulately, listening more than they talk, and when they do speak it's with the calm authority of someone who already knows how the night's going to unfold. Their energy is warm but switched-on — equally comfortable troubleshooting a blown amp or talking a nervous bride through the running order. You get the feeling that whatever you throw at them, they've already seen worse and solved it.

From this list, select the 5 traits that BEST describe your brand.

Creative, Knowledgeable, Dynamic, Confident, Authentic

What are 3 things that MUST be reflected in your brand identity? (These are your non-negotiables)

- Expertise without arrogance;
- Creativity and curation, not just gear;
- Versatility across scales and occasions

Do you have any Pinterest boards, websites, or images that capture the look/feel you're going for? If yes, please share links.

Are there any specific colours you love or hate for your brand?

Love:

- Black and white as the foundation (Duane was firm on this)
- Orange as primary accent — warm, energetic, fits the Magician/Creator energy, Gareth's favourite Magenta as a possible secondary accent for digital/social contexts (Duane uses it heavily in lighting work)
- Turquoise / teal mentioned as part of the broader palette they're drawn to
- Yellows in the same family

Avoid or use sparingly:

- Red — flagged on the call as too aggressive and too food-associated
- Greens and browns (earthy/natural palettes) — wrong feeling for the brand entirely
- Classic corporate blues — would push them toward the "stuffy/generic production company" feel they're explicitly avoiding
- Pastels or muted tones — clashes with bold/expressive positioning

The discipline of the system should be: black and white do 90% of the work, orange does the accent work, magenta appears occasionally in lighting-heavy contexts or social graphics.

Do you have an existing logo we're refining, or are we starting from scratch? Any initial thoughts on what you want?

Starting from scratch. Initial thoughts on direction:

- Wordmark, not symbol — the word "Concept" itself is the asset. The brand thesis lives in the name (whatever your concept is, we make it happen), so the logo should let the name carry the meaning.
- Cursive "Concept" + small sans-serif "Inc" — Duane's preference, confirmed on the call. The cursive signals maturity, craft, and timelessness; the sans-serif "Inc" grounds it and adds structure.
- Must work in monochrome — needs to print clean on a black golf shirt in white, and read clearly when small (truck signage, business cards) and large (event backdrops, social graphics).

- Legibility is non-negotiable — the cursive should be elegant but not florid. No flourishes that obscure the letters.
- One or two-line stacked lockup options — so it can flex across landscape, square, and vertical formats (websites, Instagram, equipment cases, crew shirts).

Six months after launch, what would make you say "This brand identity is PERFECT"?

- Inbound enquiries from the right clients without having to chase them. Hotel managers, wedding planners, restaurant owners, and corporate event coordinators finding the site, recognising the quality immediately, and getting in touch ready to book — not asking for the cheapest option, not needing to be convinced of credibility. The brand has done the qualifying work before the first call.
- The brand reads consistently across every touchpoint. A black crew shirt at a wedding, an Instagram post about a corporate gala, a quote PDF sent to Simon's Restaurant, the website hero image, and a business card all feel like the same company — confident, expert, distinctive — without any one of them feeling out of place or "off-brand."
- People remember the name. Six months in, when someone in the Cape Town events scene says "we need production for this," another industry person says "talk to Concept." The brand has shifted from "Duane and Gareth's company" to a recognised name in its own right.
- A softer fourth signal worth naming: the brand makes Duane and Gareth want to show up to it. Branding only works when the owners are proud to put it on their truck, their shirts, their email signature. If they're still excited to wear the logo at month six, it's working.

Any concerns, questions, or anything else I should know as I develop your brand?

- Two distinct buyer personas with different needs. Gareth flagged this on the call: a groom buying sound for his wedding and a hotel GM booking a corporate conference are very different customers with different emotional drivers. The brand identity can be unified, but the website information architecture and copy will need to handle both — probably through clear product/package routes (weddings, corporate, gear hire, curated events) rather than trying to write one message for everyone.
 - Photography is going to make or break the launch. The visual system relies on event photography doing the contextual heavy lifting — black/white/orange + cursive logo is disciplined enough that it needs strong imagery to come alive. Duane mentioned plans to shoot Simon's Restaurant venues professionally in the next two months. That shoot should be treated as a brand asset shoot, not just a packages shoot, with art direction agreed upfront. Worth budgeting for one strong shoot rather than relying on phone footage from past gigs."

Colour Palette

The discipline of the Concept Inc system: black and white do the heavy lifting, orange carries the accent work, and a small set of supporting hues handles digital and social contexts. The palette is built for a brand that needs to read confidently against event photography while staying clean across crew shirts, signage, web, and print.

Foundation Colours

	Off-White: #FAFAF7 Primary background for web and print. Maximises contrast against event photography and lets the cursive wordmark breathe.
	Brand Black: #1A1612 Primary brand colour. Used for the wordmark, text, crew shirts, and dominant backgrounds. The visual anchor of the entire system.

Primary Accent

	Burnt Orange: #E85D04 The single accent colour. Warm, energetic, and confident. Used for CTAs, key highlights, and brand moments. Carries the Magician/Creator energy without being aggressive or food-associated like red.
---	---

Secondary Accents (Digital & Social)

	Magenta: #C2185B Used sparingly for lighting-led visuals, social graphics, and event imagery overlays. References Duane's lighting palette without dominating the brand.
	Cyan: #0F7C7C Optional support colour for digital contexts, infographics, and package diagrams. Adds breadth when orange alone would be repetitive.

Neutrals

	Soft Black: #1A1A1A For body text on light backgrounds — slightly warmer than true black to reduce eye strain.
	Mid Grey: #6B6B6B Secondary text, metadata, captions, form labels.
	Light Grey: #E8E6E1 Section dividers, table borders, subtle backgrounds, disabled states.

Usage Guidelines:

- Black + White dominance: roughly 80–90% of any layout should be black, white, and neutrals. Restraint is what gives the brand its premium feel.
 - Orange as a single signal: use Burnt Orange for one clear purpose per screen — primary CTA, key headline accent, or hero highlight. Never as a background fill across large areas.
 - Photography is the colour: event photography brings in the magentas, blues, purples, and warm tones of live production. The brand palette stays disciplined so the photography does the emotional work.
 - Crew shirts and merch: black with white wordmark is the default. Reverse to white with black wordmark for summer/lighter contexts only.
 - Magenta and cyan are digital-only: avoid them in print materials, quote PDFs, and signage. They're for Instagram, social graphics, and the website where they can add range.

Typography

Two-part type system: an elegant cursive wordmark carries the brand identity, paired with a clean, modern sans-serif for everything else. The contrast between refined script and disciplined geometric type is the core design move.

Logo Wordmark: Custom Cursive

- Custom-drawn or refined script for the word “Concept” — elegant, legible, mature.
- Must stay readable down to 24px on small applications (business cards, social avatars).
- “Inc” set small in a clean sans-serif (see body font below) — grounds the script and adds structure.

Headings: DM Sans, Manrope or Inter

- Weights: Bold (700) for H1/H2, Semibold (600) for H3/H4.
- Tight letter-spacing (-0.02em) on large headings for a more confident, editorial feel.
- Excellent web performance and free via Google Fonts.
- DM Sans: Tight, geometric, designed for screens. Clean and confident. Premium tech-startup feel. Pairs beautifully with script logos.

Body Text: Inter, Figtree or Plus Jakarta Sans

- Weight: Regular (400) for body, Medium (500) for emphasis.
- Highly readable at small sizes, neutral enough to disappear into the content.
- Inter: Highly legible, neutral, technical. Maximum readability, neutral voice.

Typography Scale

H1	48–56px	Bold — Hero headlines
H2	36px	Bold — Section headers
H3	28px	Semibold — Subsections
H4	22px	Semibold — Card titles, package names
Body	17px	Regular — Main content
Small	14px	Regular — Captions, metadata, form labels

Line Height & Spacing

- Headings: 1.1–1.2 (tight, confident, editorial).
- Body text: 1.5–1.6 (generous, easy to read).
- Letter spacing: -0.02em on large headings, 0 on body, +0.05em on small all-caps labels.

Roadmap

High-level project plan from brand foundation through website launch, with explicit dependencies on input from Duane and Gareth at key checkpoints.

Phase 1: Brand Foundation

- Discovery, quiz, brand document signed off. Proceeding with answers as documented.

Phase 2: Visual Identity Development

- Logo design: 2–3 cursive wordmark directions for "Concept Inc," presented in mono on black and off-white.
- Refinement to final logo with stacked and inline lockups.
- Colour palette and typography confirmed (no paid fonts — Google Fonts only).
- Mini brand guidelines document (2–4 pages, web-focused).

Phase 3: Domain Name (parallel)

- Research available domains. Available candidates:
 - conceptinc.co.za
 - conceptlive.co.za
 - conceptinc.africa
 - conceptinc.capetown
 - conceptinc.joburg
- Present 3–5 strong options to Duane and Gareth with availability confirmed.
- They choose and register.

Phase 4: Website Design

- Low-fidelity wireframes in Figma for key page types: homepage, package landing, individual package, portfolio, contact, about.
- Information architecture: four package routes (Weddings, Corporate, Gear Hire, Curated Events) plus About, Portfolio, Contact.
- Photography integration plan — using Duane's existing photo bank as the starting library, with new shots dropped in as they arrive.

Phase 5: Website Copy (parallel)

- Draft copy in Google Drive (shared with Duane and Gareth for input):
 - Homepage hero, sub-headers, CTAs.
 - Package descriptions and pricing tiers (using Duane's existing 7k/12k/20k structure).
 - About narrative.
 - SEO meta titles and descriptions targeting both buyer personas.

- Iteration with Duane and Gareth via comments in the doc.

Phase 6: Website Build

- WordPress + Pro X Pro theme.
- Build directly as high-fidelity in the platform; share screenshots/scroll videos with Duane and Gareth for sign-off rather than doing separate Figma hi-fi mockups.
- Photography integration, enquiry form with persona-aware fields.
- SEO foundations: meta tags, structured data, Google Analytics, Search Console.
- Mobile responsiveness and performance optimisation.

Phase 7: Launch

- Final QA and client sign-off.
- Domain pointing, SSL, go live.
- Handover: training Duane and Gareth on basic content updates, enquiry form management, and analytics.
